

From: Matthew Kazmierczak
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 11/16/01 9:30am
Subject: Microsoft Case

Dear Justice Dept.

I believe that you are letting Microsoft off too easy in the anti-trust case. Their bundling of products into their operating system has the ability to kill any competitor. This threat will slow the innovative spirits as people will not be able to benefit from their innovations because Microsoft will copy the innovative and use their muscle to gain market share.

If you look at all the innovations in the computer world, very few of them actually come from Microsoft. Microsoft normally copies the ideas from others and bundles them into their operating system.

You should enact a system where the operation system is not the means by which Microsoft can dominate. Remember that Microsoft has already killed Netscape.

Matthew Kazmierczak
1114 P Street, NW
Washington, DC 20005